Withdrawal of Dickens £10 Note

As announced on 29 April, the Bank of England is to withdraw from circulation at the end of this month, the older style £10 notes featuring a portrait of Charles Dickens.

Holders of these notes may continue to use them until 31 July. Thereafter they will no longer be legal tender and so they will not be widely accepted in retail outlets. Most banks, building societies, and Post Offices will continue to accept the Dickens £10 notes for several months after the end of July but this will be at the discretion of the individual institution.

As with all old design Bank of England notes, the Dickens £10 notes will remain payable forever at the Bank of England in Threadneedle Street, London.

The new style £10 note with a portrait of Charles Darwin will remain in circulation.

More details are provided in the Bank's leaflet 'Withdrawal of £10 Dickens Banknote', copies of which are available, free of charge, by calling +44(0) 20 7601 4012. Information about the withdrawal of this note, and all current series notes can also be obtained from the Bank's banknote pages on this website.

Notes to Editors

These notes are being withdrawn under authority given to the Bank of England by virtue of section 1(5) of the Currency and Banknotes Act 1954.

'Legal tender' has a technical meaning in relation to the settlement of a debt. Simply, it means that if a debtor pays in legal tender the exact amount he or she owes under the terms of a contract, he or she has a good defence in law, if they are subsequently sued for non-payment of the debt. In practice the concept of 'legal tender' does not govern the acceptability of banknotes as a means of payment. This is essentially a matter for agreement between the parties involved.

The new design £10 banknote, featuring Charles Darwin, was first issued on 7 November 2000. It incorporates three new security features first introduced on the new style £20 note (featuring Sir Edward Elgar) - a foil hologram, an ultraviolet feature and micro-lettering.

There are over 600 million £10 notes in circulation of which around 117 million are Dickens notes. The Dickens £10 was first issued on 29 April 1992.
