Target Two Point Zero - The UK Economy: The Challenge for Students

Some of the keenest economics and business studies students are in the final days of preparation for the area finals of the Bank of England and The Times Interest Rate Challenge. These follow on from the closely-contested regional heats held late November, which saw 296 teams of four students from across the United Kingdom contesting a place in the upcoming second round.

The six area finals - in Luton (12 February), London and Manchester (24 February), Bristol and Farnham (25 February) and Leeds (26 February) - will see 43 teams demonstrating their knowledge of the UK economy including, of course, an awareness of the Chancellor's 2.0% inflation target for the Bank.

Taking on the role of the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee, each team has 15 minutes to argue the case for the interest rate that they think is needed to achieve the 2.0% inflation target and then answer questions from a panel of 3 judges comprising of MPC members and Bank staff. So the students not only need to show their understanding of the real economy, but their presentation techniques and teamwork are also put to the test. Past participants have said how useful this wider aspect of the Challenge has been for developing such skills.

Bank of England Governor and Chairman of the Monetary Policy Committee, Mervyn King, said: "Each year, participation in the Interest Rate Challenge is keenly sought by schools and colleges and the effort in current circumstances made by students and their teachers to prepare for the competition is very encouraging. I am sure the area finals will see some really high-quality and stimulating presentations."

The enormous background effort by the students and their teachers does not go unrewarded: the six winning teams - which go on to the national final - each receive a trophy, whilst the runner-up teams are awarded a cheque for £650 for their school or college and the third-placed teams receive £350. The Bank of England in London is the venue for the exciting national final, to be held this year on 20 March, with the Challenge Trophy and a cheque for £10,000 at stake.
