The Open Forum is nearly here

We are delighted to announce that we will be joined by Mario Draghi, President of the European Central Bank, at the Open Forum on 11 November in the Guildhall.

We are publishing today a programme for each of the plenaries and breakout sessions. This includes the full set of panellists, drawn from across financial markets and wider society, and the chairs who will facilitate each discussion.

Public registration will close at midnight this Sunday, 25 October. We are delighted by the level of interest shown so far and look forward to drawing the ballot next week.

Financial markets matter to everyone. The Open Forum presents an opportunity to map a positive future for financial markets and reinforce their social licence.
